CSNTM* description:

MS number: Med[ieval] Ms G[rey] 124
Contents: e†
Date: XII
Material: parchment
Columns: 1
Lines per page: 26-28 (not verified at lower number)
Dimensions: 19.8 x 14.8 x 5.25 cm
Leaves: 200 (after 22v +1)

Page Count: 400 (including fragmentary strip with a child's handwriting on it). + 14 cover material; MS is foliated beginning with Eusebian Canon

Cover material: 12 + spine + first page with scale= 14. 3 front, including cover-r & v (both sides, including penciled note by Grey about twin (?) in Bodleian); 3 back, including cover r & v. Leaves of cover material are all paper.

UV (MS pages, not ours): "174v," "175r," "190v," "192v," "193r" to the end

Interesting or significant images: spine says "Evangelia IV Graece/MS. In Membranis MCXXVIII" [this does not refer to the date of the binding, because the cover is about 19th century]. Eusebian canons list (not very ornate), only two leaves. Quite a bit of information is missing. 4v is icon of Matthew (remarkably incompletely; crude illustration, probably done much later). Lectionary apparatus is used and rubricated at every point. After 22v, a child's alphabet is written on the flap. "47r" has really nice prickings. MS has been trimmed, because the prickings are right at the edge at times. Matthew ends at "62r," and lists how many stichoi he uses. And the kephalaia for Mark start on leaf "63." Mark starts on "64r." "98r" is Mark 16:8, and in pencil a note that says, "ends in some MSS." Luke's kephalaia start on "99r." The (crude) icon of Luke is "100v." Luke ends on "159v." John starts "160r." John 5:4 is athetized in the margin on "167v." "174v" has been scraped clean, and a later scribe in a much more petite hand (31 lines, letters more crowded and smaller) included the PA, which was evidently not there before. The scribe had to continue his writing for 4 lines onto “175r” to fit the whole text in.
