<sup>1</sup> The text is on the verso side of a papyrus roll. Nothing discernible with the naked eye is on the recto side.

<sup>4</sup> It is unclear how one can determine that this is a single column since it is on the backside of a scroll.

Interesting or significant material: This is the only NT MS that is written on the verso of a roll in which the recto has nothing on it. Perhaps the leaf was a binding strip used in a book, with the recto side of the material stripped off. It is also possible that the recto side of the MS was originally blank at this point.
