[†] Only the paper leaves (4–5) are in a different hand.

Interesting or significant material: Western order of the Gospels, beginning with Luke, then Mark (Matt, John not in this codex). 1r has hypothesis and, unceremoniously, the beginning of the text of Luke. 47 has stitching to repair an apparent knife cut to the parchment before it was written on. Other places, too. Several marginalia, including some on the inside margin; often text goes all the way into the inner margin. Mk begins on 95r, which begins a new quire. Thus, one cannot be sure that Mark originally followed Luke, since the quires are not numbered and the leaves are numbered by a later hand. The hypothesis for Mark includes quotations from the prologue to John (95r). 129v has no text on it, only bleed-through. Leaves have been trimmed (last page has text cut off at the bottom of leaf). Not sure why INTF says the MS is incomplete, since it finishes with Mark 16.20. Probably some leaves missing in the middle.

Last quire of Mark measures 25.7 x 20.2. First quire of Luke measures 25.5 x 20.2. Last quire of Luke is 25.9 x 20.2. First quire of Mark is 25.9 x 20.2. Although the evidence is slim, this suggests that the order of Luke then Mark is original since the quires now next to each other are closer in size than if the order had been Mark then Luke. Last quire is only 6 leaves, and last quire of Luke is also 6 leaves.

MS has two clasps, still working.

Hair side is especially blurry.
